THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMATION

1. In February 1952 the Revolutionary Military Council (RMC) organized a Southwest Frontier Area Inspection Group (SFAIG). Personnel of this group were appointed from four units of the RMC: the Central Staff Department, the Central Political Department, the Central Supply and Service Command, and Chinese Communist Army Headquarters. The group consisted of a chief, three assistant chiefs, and 25 members, including military operations staff officers, meteorological staff officers, political workers, supply personnel, survey and drafting personnel, intelligence personnel, and communications personnel.
2. On 1 March the SFAIG left Peiping for Chungking to call on Southwest Military Area headquarters, which was to send representatives to accompany them on their inspection tours through Yunnan and Sikang. The group was to spend six months inspecting the southwest frontier and then return to Peiping.
